CHARLOTTENBURG

A CASTLE, THE SPREE & LOTS OF NEIGHBOURHOOD CHARM

Alt-Charlottenburg would certainly deserve the distinction of favourite neighbourhood. Here, the impulsive Berlin city life combines with the peace and security of the green surroundings - it was, is and remains the best address in the city.

Charlottenburg has always attracted intellectuals, artists, academics and business people. This reflects itself in the higher level of education of the residents and is also mirrored in the immediate surroundings: Charlottenburg has more than 20 schools with different orientations, and there are also international schools. The population structure has changed little in comparison to other inner-city locations in Berlin. Many sports clubs and music schools have a long tradition here and are used by several generations.

The heart of the district, today's Alt-Charlottenburg between the Spree, Zillestrasse and Nehringstrasse, was subject to constant change. Clearly recognisable in the architecture and urban planning is the fact that Charlottenburg was the richest municipality of the Wilhelmine Empire until it was incorporated into "Greater Berlin" in 1920: the houses convey architectural noblesse, the parks are generous and lush.

If you take a 10 minute walk to the west along the Spree, you'll find yourself in front of the one and only Schloss Charlottenburg. You can enjoy the Schlossgarten as part of the neighbourhood life.

Even the daily needs are met in the immediate vicinity. Otto-Suhr-Allee with its many shops is about 250 metres away. If the wide range of local shops does not meet all your needs, simply take the U7 or the M45 bus, which stops at the Zoologischer Garten station, among others.

On the way home, you then make a small diversion to say "hello" to the Spree and wonder a little how you ever lived anywhere else - because Charlottenburg is the soul of the city. It embodies an authentic Berlin - just the way visitors and residents want their city to be.

BRAUHOFSSTR.15

BLOSSOMING ENSEMBLE WITH ARTFUL DETAILS

In the imperial era, this is where the high society enjoyed their afternoon tea and a view of the passing carriages of "royalty" on their way to Charlottenburg Palace.

Today, every buyer is rightfully delighted with the generous amount of space and the room height, which in earlier times was reserved only for the better society.

The façade of Brauhofstr. 15 with its freshly reconstructed stucco applications and the sunny light yellow paint shines out at you. The completely new installation of historic wooden windows on the front façade clearly shows how much care was taken here.

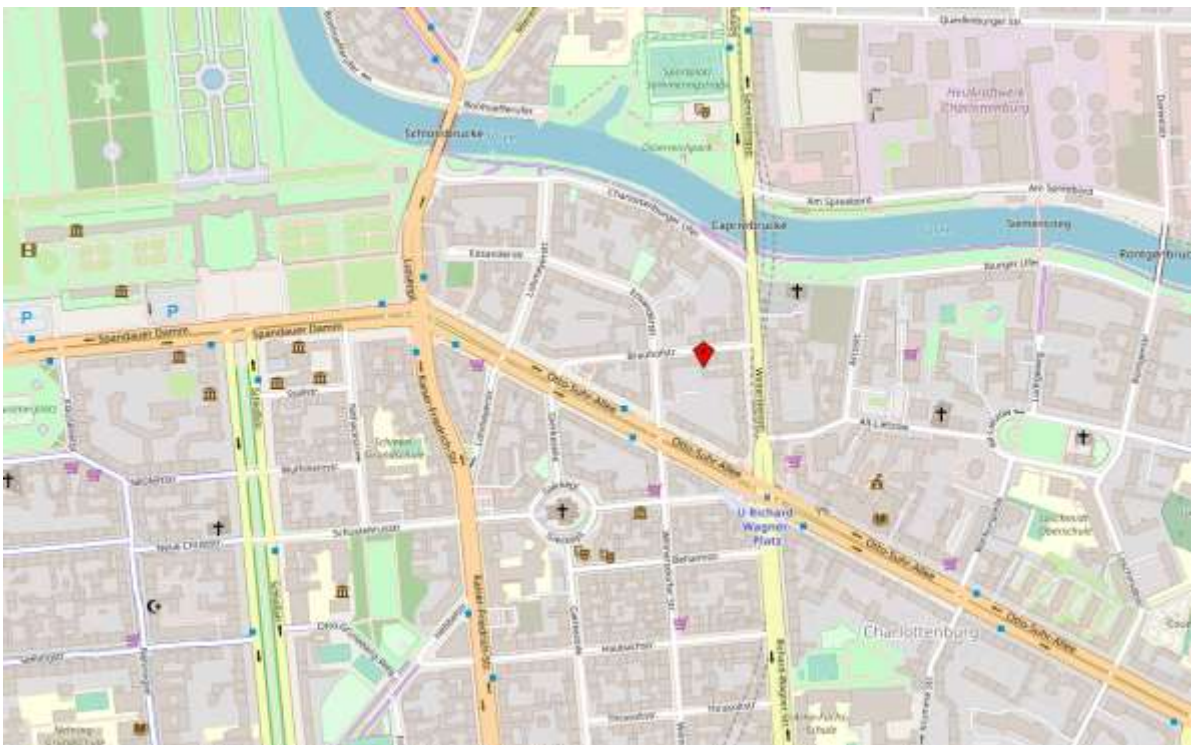

This expert approach is continued in the redesign of the entrance area and staircases.

The renovated doorbell system and the modern entrance doors create a pleasant and welcoming atmosphere.

In the current refurbishment, the restrained restoration of the original character of the building was the declared goal of the measures, which were carried out with great craftsmanship.

Permission has been granted for the addition of a lift.

We will of course be happy to provide you with a detailed building description. You determine the design of your new home yourself - because there should be no limits to your individuality.
